United we thrive!

Leaders in Thrivopolis are tackling extreme division in its politics by bridging divides and creating a shared civic purpose. When communities are fractured, conversations fall silent, public service feels dangerous, and the threat of political violence looms large. But in Thrivopolis, the choice is clear: collaboration over conflict.

The importance of names...

A new melody spreads across the canopy as a young adult's chosen name is used by family, friends, and everyone else. This is vital: transgender young people who are called by their chosen names at home, school, work, and by friends have fewer symptoms of severe depression and report fewer thoughts of suicide. That's a song worth singing.

Thrivopolis all-stars...

In a game-changing move, Coach Violet and the Thrivopolis Toucans now welcome every young woman to the playing field. Recognizing the vital role of sports in shaping lives, they're celebrating natural body diversity and the unique talents of every athlete. For transgender and cisgender athletes alike, this policy improves mental health, raises test scores, and builds confidence.

A very vibrant verdict...

Judge Black just ruled “no” on “conversion therapy,” a so-called treatment that tries to change a person’s sexual orientation or gender identity. Proven harmful yet legal in half of the U.S. states today, this practice is no longer allowed in Thrivopolis, now a haven for acceptance and inclusivity.

It's no pipe dream!

Thrivopolis leaders are finally making one thing crystal clear: It's time to purge lead from all the pipes and pails drawing water from our pristine springs! That's because aging water infrastructure with even trace amounts of lead causes serious health, behavioral, and learning challenges in children. Cheers to safe sips!

Young, wild, and free!

Thrivopolis is turning up the volume on fun outdoors, prioritizing older teens and young adults in public spaces. Parks and playgrounds are higher, wilder, faster, and more difficult. As the sun sets, boardwalks come alive with dance parties under the stars. Young people on bikes, skateboards and scooters whiz by—free and unstoppable!

Wi-fi warriors...

Thrivopolis takes a firm stand against anti-gay and anti-trans hate online. Recognizing the dangerous—even deadly—consequences of online hate and lies, Thrivopolis puts a stop to Big Tech algorithms that amplify hate. Finally, serious enforcement of online community standards—no matter how many followers you have.

Does red tape fill an empty belly?

Of course not. Yet, the maze-like journey to get food benefits traps too many people—even in Thrivopolis. Forms to complete, backup documentation to provide, and deadlines to meet—these tasks are harder when you're dealing with life's challenges, like mental health, substance use issues, or hunger.

Oh baby, it's about time!

With a new, flexible attendance policy for pregnant and parenting students, Thrivopolis schools are now recognizing the art of balancing academics and parenting as a true superpower! This policy gives every student the chance to ace Ms. Ruby's tests, graduate, and showcase their remarkable determination for school and family.

High five!

A wave of excitement ripples through Thrivopolis as students are rallying to boost college and job training registrations. In parks and cafes, they're teaming up to help each other apply to multiple programs, secure financial aid early, and build connections in their fields. Altogether, this is opening doors to brighter futures for everyone.

On the menu: Bullying

While school-based meals are a reliable source of food for millions, the school lunchroom can be a hostile place for many. LGBTQ+ youth are 2 times as likely to experience bullying than their straight, cis-gender peers. For them, this can mean fewer meals. That's why creating safe spaces in cafeterias is essential, even in Thrivopolis.

Say ahhh!

Nurse White and Sunny, the Social Impact Entrepreneur, have joined forces to make the language of care universal. Interpretation is now available for every language and dialect during Thrivopolis tele-visits. This ensures that good health isn't lost in translation and secures wellness for all Thrivopolis residents, no matter their native tongue.

Dare to care!

In Thrivopolis, every young person seeking long-acting reversible contraception (LARC) is now paired with a LARC doula. These dedicated caretakers confront the dark legacy of racism and reproductive coercion, with comprehensive physical and emotional support and advocacy. More than just care, this is a bold stride toward community healing and justice.

A bright idea!

Ranger Greene is on the move, installing sunscreen dispensers across Thrivopolis parks, beaches, and high-altitude ski slopes. That's because sunburn, especially early in life, increases the risk of skin cancer, the most common cancer in the U.S. Making sun protection effortless for everyone ensures fun in the sun for decades to come.

Tick, tock.

For this script, it's roadblock o'clock. The only pharmacist in Thrivopolis is refusing to dispense prescriptions for emergency contraception, creating a barrier to timely healthcare for many – a practice allowed in some regions of the U.S. but a stark contrast to the ethos of support and accessibility in Thrivopolis.

Skip your turn.

Under wraps!

Thrivopolis just made a big rule: young folks' health visits stay private – no ifs, ands or buts! That's because when confidentiality is protected, young people are more likely to seek health care, talk about sensitive topics, and follow up. This isn't the case everywhere. In many places, providers are allowed, encouraged or even mandated to inform a minor's parent of services, even sensitive ones.

Cash for change!

Thrivopolis is putting trust and resources directly into the hands of young people who are unhoused. By offering monthly cash stipends (with no strings attached!), Thrivopolis is granting budding adults' autonomy over addressing their own immediate needs and future dreams.

The right fit?!

In Thrivopolis, young adults with autism are gearing up for work—and with the right vocational support, they're bringing their unique strengths and intense passions to job sites everywhere. Like many other youth jobs in the U.S., wages for these roles are falling short of a living wage. More can and must be done to value the full spectrum of young talent!

Condom Delivery App

In Thrivopolis, a fleet of tiny delivery robots powered by stardust brings protection straight to young people. With the download of an app, free condoms and practical tips are just a tap away. Though it feels magical, mass distribution and education strategies for condoms are shown to boost use—and safety.

resource

Reusable Water Bottle

In Thrivopolis, Ranger Greene encourages young people to keep their reusable water bottles close at hand—if they have one.

That's because staying hydrated is critical for overall well-being, especially for kidney health, and having a bottle on hand serves as a simple reminder to drink up throughout the day.

Birth Control

There's no wrong answer here. For young people who have sex, the most effective way to prevent unplanned pregnancy is using hormonal birth control or an intrauterine device (IUD), along with condoms. But birth control isn't one size fits all. That's why all young people need access to a full range of birth control options.

Naloxone and Drug Testing Strips

Preparation is priceless. Naloxone and fentanyl testing strips are critical resources for young people, offering a quick and effective way to reverse opioid overdoses and detect extra-dangerous substances in drugs. Requiring no formal training, these life-savers can be used by young people whenever and wherever they are needed most.

Name Change Assistance

Many transgender people change their legal name to better represent who they are. In Thrivopolis, Judge Black is dedicated to making this process smoother, but extra steps—like posting the name change in a local newspaper—still pose a costly challenge, complicating what should be an empowering journey of self-affirmation.

Photo ID

A photo ID opens doors. From job applications to healthcare, an ID allows young people to access essential services and fully participate in society. However, for many—especially those experiencing unstable housing—getting an ID can be difficult, even in Thrivopolis. Costs, proof of residency, and parental consent are common barriers.

Smartphone

Staying connected is crucial. With access to smartphones, unhoused young people can monitor housing waitlists, coordinate services, stay in touch with jobs and gigs, and maintain connections with loved ones. These valuable self-management tools offer stability and connection, especially in uncertain times.

Checking Account

Check this out! Checking accounts give young people the freedom to manage their money independently, allowing them to pay for health services and build a financial history. They provide a safe place for savings and, when combined with financial literacy, can teach budgeting skills, foster independence, and even support long-term stability.

At-home STI testing kit

Shame, stigma, and fear of judgement can prevent many young people from getting tested for STIs. At-home STI testing kits change that. Research shows that these discreet testing options boost testing rates, helping young people in Thrivopolis skip the clinic and infections.

HPV Vaccine

Too many young people miss out on the HPV vaccine, which prevents several types of cancer. In Thrivopolis, young people can get vaccinated during “The Big Boost,” a yearly vaccination event. With encouragement from Ms. Ruby and other school staff, this proven school-based strategy becomes even more effective at reaching those who might otherwise miss out.

Period Products

Period products should be as common as toilet paper, but often aren't. Having pads, tampons, and menstrual cups readily available allows young people manage their periods with dignity and comfort, stay in class, and participate fully.

Bicycle

Biking is more than just fun—it's a way for young people to stay healthy and access crucial support and opportunities. Whether it's getting to school, work, appointments, or just explore Thrivopolis, in places with good biking infrastructure, bikes remove transportation hurdles and promise the independence many young people need to thrive.

Basic Hygiene Products

Clean and confident! Basic hygiene products like soap, toothpaste, and deodorant make it easy for young people to maintain their personal care routine, boosting self-esteem and overall well-being.

resource

Private Doctors Visit

Confidential care matters. Young people should be able to rest assured that they can talk with their health care provider in private, giving them space to talk about health concerns openly. This helps build strong healthcare habits while building independence.

Trusted Adult

Having a trusted adult to confide in reduces behavior that can negatively impact long-term health and well-being. That's why it's so important to help young people identify and strengthen mentoring relationships already existing within their social networks.

High School Diploma

High school graduation not only tees up further education and training in the not-so-distant future, but it also unlocks better health for decades to come. That's why it's crucial for schools to keep students engaged and in school today—helping them dream and do big things through a wide range of mentorship and skill-building.

STI Prevention Medication

With STI rates climbing, the same old prevention strategies aren't enough. That's why in Thrivopolis, some young people at higher risk can now access medications like PrEP to prevent HIV and doxy-PEP to guard against bacterial infections, offering a fresh, research-backed approach to STI prevention.

Service Animal

One thing's for sure: These paws have a purpose! Offering essential, life-changing support for a wide range of disabilities, service and support animals help young people navigate Thrivopolis—and everyday life—with confidence, independence, and a sprinkle of fur.
